

Technical Services Information Bureau

The technical services information bureau (TSIB) is the technical authority for the wall and ceiling industry and the educational body for Building Departments and local jurisdictions. TSIB is an industry funded not-for-profit organization with origins dating back to 1901. The TSIB accepts no advertising.

The intent of this binder is to provide “generic” wall and ceiling construction information and clarification of building code language and industry standards. The Technical Bulletins were developed in general terms to be used in many varying conditions and are not project specific.

All Technical bulletins have recieved peer and code review by a panel of experts in that particular field. The TSIB provides no warranty, express or implied, for how these Technical Bulletins are used or implemented on projects.
